

Queensland Agriculture Workforce Network

Queensland
Agriculture
Workforce
Network

The Queensland Agriculture Workforce Network (QAWN) is an industry-led rural jobs initiative funded by the Queensland Government. QAWN supports the Government's objective of building industry capacity to identify current and emerging agricultural workforce availability and capability issues.

The project supports the agriculture industry and rural jobs growth by providing agribusinesses with a broad range of advice and guidance on workforce attraction, retention and ongoing development of their workforces.

Our aim is to work with you to understand your workforce needs and to connect you with the most appropriate solution to help grow your business.

Our services:

- providing training and employment advice and support
- improving connections between industry, jobseekers and service providers
- facilitating training and employment opportunities
- providing feedback to service providers to drive improved offerings
- providing industry intelligence to the Rural Jobs and Skills Alliance, government agencies and communities to help shape government policy and investment to better meet industry's workforce needs both now and into the future.

Agriculture workforce officers provide advice on workforce services and initiatives to all Queensland agribusinesses, regardless of commodity or organisation membership.

Agribusiness employers are encouraged to explore what labour and training options are available in your region. Please find contact details for your local QAWN officer overleaf.

An industry led initiative supported by the Queensland Government and hosted by:

